Over half of all English local authorities outside London have targets that are below housing need. 13% of authorities have targets that only meet half of housing need. Many of these are around London where need for housing is greatest.